Abstract: This article analyzes the impact of the annexation of Crimea on changes in the perception of Crimean Tatars in society and public policy in continental Ukraine after 2014. The author gives structure to Ukrainian politics in this area by outlining the "Crimean trajectories" in public policy and the difficulties that have emerged in the process of developing policy toward populations of Crimean Tatars. In this article, the complexity of the process of integrating Crimean Tatars is traced to Ukraine's unwritten policy concerning the de-occupation of Crimea, the regulation of mechanisms of interaction between Ukrainian state authorities and Crimean Tatars, the formation of collective memory on the basis of historical events and figures, the activities of Muslim organizations, and the revision of the religious map of Ukraine.

Keywords: Ukraine, Crimean Tatars, Crimea, collective memory, Kurultai, de-occupation strategy, Ministry of Information Policy
